NDSR Mission

...to build a dedicated community of professionals who will advance our nation's capabilities in managing, preserving and making accessible the record of human achievement held in digital form.

NDSR Objectives

The program seeks to:

- Define the core competencies of digital stewardship training
- Bridge classroom education and professional experience
- Create a community of experts in the field
- Establish a national model for digital stewardship training

NDSR Overview

The program is:

- Supported by Institute of Museum and Library Services (IMLS)
- Composed of 10 residents and 5 DC Institutions
- Includes a 2 week digital stewardship immersion workshop

Accomplishments to Date

So far we have:

- Developed overall goals, strategies, milestones, and budget for the program
- Selected and hosted a curriculum development panel
- Created an initial draft of residency curriculum
- Identified potential hosts in the D.C. area
- Developed and used communication channels to increase visibility for the program
 - NDSR Website:

NDSR Mission

The mission of the National Digital Stewardship Residency (NDSR) is to build a dedicated community of professionals who will advance our nation's capabilities in managing, preserving, and making accessible the digital record of human achievement. This will enable current and future generations to fully realize the potential of digital resources now and for years to come.

About Us

The National Digital Stewardship Residency is a groundbreaking new program created by the Library of Congress in partnership with the Institute of Museum and Library Sciences (IMLS).

The Residency

Residents of the NDSR program will have the opportunity to develop, apply, and advance their digital stewardship knowledge and skills in real-world settings. Starting in June 2013, these paid residency experiences will be hosted in five Washington, D.C. area institutions, including the Library of Congress.

Application Info

Application info will become available in late 2012. In the meantime, please visit the Application Info link for basic application requirements.
